

Columbia friends,

Thanks! It's not been an easy decision or effort to leave the gem of commotion after thirty-six years. Still, the moving van comes a week from today. It and I will head east, and end up only four miles south of I-70. For probably the next year, I have a small apartment here: 1350 Beverly Rd Apt 1215, McLean, VA 2210.

This is just two blocks from my new office with the Institute for Physical Sciences. There I'll be doing varieties of system administration and research computing support. McLean is about eight miles up the Potomac from the Lincoln Memorial, where many of your congress-critters go home to rest after a long day of spending your money.

This gmail.com email address should continue to reach me: Greg.JohnsonG

More goodbyes, my emerging circumstances, and ruminations may appear occasionally on my new blog:
